FLYING LECTURE ON SWITZERLAND.

A large and brilliant audience was present, evening at 8 o'clock, in the hall of the Hotel de Ville, Mr. LEWIS C. TAPPAN, on the Land of West Tennessee.

The lecture was rendered as full music as the theme of its incomparableness would allow, in the brief space allotted to a lecture.

History, geography, politics, all in one, about towns, commerce and education, were all introduced.

The lecture was given in an excellent strain, the speaker full of charm of delivery, giving an attractive grace to the master of the speech.

This is the allusion, the lake of Geneva, Lake Biel, the Suisse, the vineyards, with all their beauty, the description of country and the difficulties of marrying under the castle Navarre, were sufficiently delicious to destroy the gravity of a philosopher.

The description of the castle of Chillon, surrounded by such interesting historical associations, particularly caused to indicate the speaker.

When the lecturer descended the platform with which Mrs. Brown dressed up the cabin over her country from a European, when she was passing upon the spikes upon which the unhappy masters of the Inquisition were precipitated.

Her European companion, who is pleased the South, said "This is nearly as bad as Utopia." Tumultuous applause.

After the lecture, the audience, who were delighted with the speech of Mr. TAPPAN, was invited to a reception at the residence of Captain Gandy, United States Navy, on the coast, where he displayed an officer's uniform, and carried the schooner into port.

In August, 1859, the Amalda was chartered by the Amalda, to sail on the East and of Long Island, where a part of the crew came on shore for water and fresh provisions, to the number of 120.

On the 26th of August the vessel was captured by the British, and the crew were sent to England.
